A modern text editor made for Markdown Paired with Draft.js, it's super easy to create and edit snippets in Markdown. Create beautiful words with a modern approach Make your text look beautiful and edit it the way you want Create timeless documents that look clean. Do it all with ease and simplicity. Instantly edit and export to HTML or PDF Write and share right away. As mentioned in the description, the app enables you to create Markdown snippets. This feature is really the only thing that saved it from being a basic version of a modern Markdown editor. We found it easy to use, intuitive, and the modern interface was also nice to work with. The advanced functionality offered by the app was also crucial and helped to facilitate the editing process. We also liked the fact that it allowed us to create snippets without the need to use a document. The only minor issue that we found involved images. Though the program worked fine when adding a 400x400.png file, it didn't work that well with other extensions, especially gif files. Thanks to the little issues we found in that department, we can't help but rate it lower than our initial rating. A nervous system engram encodes information necessary for successful recovery of the nerve circuit. Much effort has been invested in identifying the engram(s) of a nervous system memory, but the nature of the engram remains largely elusive. We propose that the engram of a particular memory contains an important signal that is transmitted to the injured region in the early phase of recovery. In this manuscript, we propose two hypotheses, the outcome-dependent engram hypothesis and the fast-spike inhibition hypothesis. The first hypothesis states that the engram of a nerve circuit is determined by the outcome of the injury, and the engram is updated only when the injured region is repaired, i.e., the outcome-dependent engram hypothesis. The second hypothesis claims that the engram contains a topographic signal for the inhibition of neurons, hence the fast-spike inhibition hypothesis. To test these hypotheses, we estimated the receptive fields of neurons based on the recordings of spiking activities from the animals in the after-injury stage. These receptive fields of neurons were modeled as the Gaussian distribution. Next, we investigated the properties of synaptic responses in the nerve circuits reconstructed by the receptive fields. We analyzed the relationship between the mean synaptic input and the firing rate

For the past 20 years we have had the pleasure of offering our weekly swim classes throughout the summer months. We love seeing all the parents and their children learning to swim and having fun in the water. We are now excited to announce that we will be offering a new 6 week swim program for adults. The six week program will begin on the 27th of April. There will be two classes each week at 10.15am and 12.15pm. These sessions will be ideal for those who are new to swimming, and at the same time really enjoyable for anyone who has been swimming for a while. The program is five lessons per week with extended breaks and time for you to relax or socialise with other people in the pool. The prices for the adult swim program are: The cost of the swim program is $80 (includes a lovely change-room/changing area with lockers and towels for $7.50 and all equipment. There will be other classes throughout the year including water aerobics, tennis, swimming and water ballet. Please keep a look out for our calendar.3D Animation The PODnet Institute is dedicated to high quality 3D animation services of the best animation studios.
