Photoshop is considered the standard tool for digital compositing, even though the alternatives are advanced tools. It is also used for many other types of image editing, including painting and drawing. Chronological table of features This is an article about Photoshop. For what is not Photoshop, read Wikipedia's article about graphic design Feature Name Feature Description Selective Colour Composite A new way of editing Photoshop images, with automatic detection of pixels. Edit by colour, or by gradients, using an extremely efficient method. Thresholding A way of drastically changing an image without losing information, by replacing a small part of an image with a completely different and perfect image. The original part stays untouched. Multiply A way of combining two or more images. Blending Images are combined together. They are not added as layers. Filter Designates a certain region of an image for a new filter. The new filter is applied to this area and to the rest of the image. Pixel Blending Pixel Blending allows the user to see the areas that are actually combined. Blending Images works on layers, and not on pixels. The most commonly used blending mode is Pixel Blending. Soft Light A way of painting on an image. It is used with a brush or a 'painter's palette'. Hard Light A way of painting on an image, using only highlights. By using soft light, the image can be painted on as well. Lighten A way of replacing a bright part of an image by a darker one. It is used for corrections and overlays. Lighten Analogue Analogue Lighten is a very simple way to lighten an image. Grow A way of adding a new layer on top of an image. It allows the user to add texts, graphics or a 'secondary' image. This secondary image can be a filtered image or a separate photo. Darken A way of replacing a dark part of an image by a brighter one. Grow A way of adding a new layer on top of an image. It allows the user to add texts, graphics or a 'secondary' image. This secondary image can be a filtered image or a separate photo. Darken Analogue Analogue Darken is a very simple way to darken an image. Dodge Analogue Analogue Dodge is a very simple way to correct the brightness of an image. Burn Analogue Analogue Burn is a very simple way to correct the darkness of an image. Treating Shabbat Shalom with its creator: Five ways to connect with the Jewish tradition of Shabbat By Karen Larsen On the day that Shabbat comes, Jews in whatever region of the world are called to pause and re-evaluate the priorities of the week. Shabbat is a time when the individual is called to step back from the busyness of the week and consider the world we live in. Even after moving to a new place, we yearn for the repetition of the rituals of Shabbat. We reflect on the days before the Sabbath, the week between Shabbat and Shabbat, and the nights before Shabbat. Feeling disconnected? Reflecting on the weeks before Shabbat can feel like reconnecting in a very simple way. Shabbat Shalom: Reclaiming the tradition Karen Larsen offers five ways to connect with Shabbat Shalom using some of her favorite tools: 1. Read a book about the Jewish tradition A great way to get started with Shabbat is to read a book about the Jewish tradition. Classically, scholars read weekly from a Sefer Torah, or large book of Jewish law. Instead, a Sefer Torah can be used as a frame for exploration. Read from the weekly parsha (Torah portion), which is a collection of topics designed to inspire, spark discussions and deepen relationships. This parsha can act as a guide to help you stay connected with your tradition in your own way. 2. Take a time-out from technology Technology has become a part of our lives. Email in the morning, work on the computer for most of the day, and check your phone for a message or a notification in the evening. It can be difficult to make time for technology, but there is a way. Research shows that 50% of people give up their cable connection during Shabbat. Take a step back from technology for the duration of Shabbat and you will find that your connection to your tradition is more important. 3. Call a friend One of the biggest lies we tell ourselves is that we will connect with people if we wait a year. It is not possible to accomplish meaningful relationships in a year. Reach out to a friend who is also working on disconnecting from technology, to maintain a conversation with someone who is "in the zone" and

Cyprus Airways has resumed the services to the Bekaa Valley in Lebanon, a famous resort for Greek and French clients, according to the report published at least a week ago by the Cyprus Mail. The flight was previously suspended in February. The Paris-based airline said that the flight will depart from Cyprus at 2pm local time. The route is one of the most visited flights by Greek and French tourists in Lebanon. "Practical difficulties forced us to suspend our services in this area and we are very pleased to be able to resume this route with an additional weekly flight on Thursday," said Cypriot Airlines' spokesperson.Q: How to create a custom signed url so that it has a different url but same content? I am trying to create a custom signed url from my API to an app that uses a CMS. Since the CMS takes the content and puts it in a specific url, I would like to create a custom signed url. But my problem is that it says in the documentation that to create a custom url it takes 2 parameters, one of which is an expiration time that I would like to control through my API But when I try to create it I get the following error: Invalid parameter supplied to API request. Code: expirationTime (in seconds) is used by the client to specify when a signed url should expire. The API is free to choose how to handle expired signed urls. The default behavior is to redirect the user to the canonical signed url, so that the client will automatically obtain the new expiration. However, signed urls may be used as a link to access/download/print content outside the management domain of the API, so that the client can cache the content. In these cases, the API provides a custom expiration time to specify when the client should refresh the signed url and obtain a new expiration. How can I create a custom url in this case? A: According to the docs, you can't create a custom expiration time with a custom expiration value. The most you can do is to use a cached expired signed url if you can't redirect the user to the canonical signed url: expirationTime (in seconds) is used by the client to specify when a signed url should expire. The API is free to choose how to handle expired signed urls. The default
