This process is fairly straightforward and fairly inexpensive. There are several providers of web hosting and you need to find the one that suits your needs best. If your site will be used for personal design work, you don't have to go through as many hoops; you can keep everything on a local area network. If you intend to make money from your site, or your work has a commercial purpose, then you must look into the tax implications of using a Web host based in the United States, as described in Chapter 12. To get started, you need to decide what type of site you will be hosting, whether you will host a Web site for yourself or for someone else. If you don't plan to make money from your Web site, you should make your Web host a local area network location. This arrangement means that the site is always accessible through the network and that you don't have to pay for Internet access. If you plan to make money by selling your products online and if the Web site will be used on the World Wide Web, then you should look into one of the Web sites that provide Web hosting. The big one is the www.tutorialspoint.com/websites/webserver.asp, and there is a lot of information on the Internet about choosing a provider. Most commercial Web hosting services don't allow you to run a Web site locally on your machine — even if it's a very small site. Most of them offer sites that are allocated to a particular computer, and the computer's IP (Internet protocol) address defines the location of the site. So they're a good choice if your site is intended to be static and doesn't change often. ## Choosing a Web Host After you've decided how to set up your Web site,

Endemic goiter with a favorable outcome. Endemic goiter with a favorable outcome (EGWO) is characterized by a volume of goiter equal to or larger than 10 cm³ in a young child or a young adult who has never been treated with radioactive iodine or thyroid hormones. Risk factors are in the absence of other predisposing factors for development of the disease [in particular in a context of iodine deficiency (ID)]. The diagnosis is based on physical examination that establishes the presence of characteristic palpable goiter and on biochemical parameters. It is often associated with autoimmune thyroid disease, particularly Hashimoto's thyroiditis, and the TSH receptor blocking antibody concentrations are increased. Some authors have suggested that EGWO may also be due to the presence of thyroid-stimulating antibodies, but this phenomenon has not been demonstrated to be increased in these children [2]. EGWO is generally considered a distinct entity, but many authors consider that it is an early stage of postpartum hypothyroidism [3-5]. The natural history, clinical features, and outcome of untreated EGWO and the natural history, clinical features, and outcome of treated EGWO are different. The estimated annual incidence of EGWO is 0.2 per 1,000 at birth. Indeed, EGWO may be a transient phenomenon because it disappears spontaneously in the majority of children after 18 to 21 months [6]. A small number of patients, however, may develop EGWO and then require treatment. The characteristics of EGWO, and its outcome, may therefore vary according to the absence or presence of Hashimoto's thyroiditis, which may modify its features, e.g., the failure to recover rapidly from hypothyroidism, the difference in the clinical presentation, the risk of developing papillary thyroid cancer, the degree of iodine deficiency and, consequently, the risk of non-treated disease or thyroid autonomy [7-9]. In short, we cannot exclude that EGWO may be a necessary step in the natural history of hyperthyroidism and other forms of euthyroidism (including subclinical hyperthyroidism).

Q: Pixi js resize bounds Using Pixi js and facing a problem. I'm using the resize event to limit the scale of the game area. This is working fine but is running into a problem because the texture is loading in from a different location. When the texture loads the root position is different and therefore the canvas bounds is different.

Evaluation of the profile of endometrial cancer in young patients. The purpose of this retrospective study is to analyze the clinicopathologic and epidemiologic characteristics of endometrial cancer in women under 40 years of age and to evaluate surgical treatment options. Women with stage I-III endometrial cancer treated at the Rabin Medical Center from 1986 to 2006 were included in the study. Twenty-eight (3.2%) out of 878 patients had endometrial cancer diagnosed before 40 years of age. At presentation, 87% of these patients were symptomatic and 38% were referred to the gynecologic clinic by their family physician for further investigations; no patients presented with hemorrhagic or prolapsed uterine bleeding. The majority of these young patients were diagnosed with well-differentiated tumors (63%), low-risk International Federation of Gynecology and Obstetrics stage (78%), and uterine serous carcinomas (54%), while the most commonly reported symptoms were anemia (57%), hypogonadism (43%), and amenorrhea (43%). The uterus was the most common site of disease (74%) and 70% of the patients underwent total abdominal hysterectomy and bilateral salpingo-oophorectomy. Of those who were preoperatively diagnosed as having well-differentiated endometrial cancers, 48% received adjuvant therapy (radiation therapy or combination of radiation therapy and adjuvant chemotherapy) with no significant difference in recurrence and survival rates when compared with those without adjuvant therapy.
